

How to Organize Your Bedroom on Nearly Any Budget

Declutter and organize a bedroom with ideas that address your storage needs and work with your budget

Jeanne Taylor November 16, 2022

Houzz Contributor. Jeanne Taylor is a professional home organizer in the San Francisco Bay Area. She is the co-owner of Tailorly with her business partner Patricia Lee. Together they create beautiful homes through decluttering, organizing, and styling. For more information visit www.tailorly.net.

Bedrooms may not be the first spaces you think of when it comes to home organizing. Perhaps yours are due for a refresh. Even if you're not ready for a complete bedroom makeover, a little decluttering and organizing might support a more peaceful environment in which to relax and unwind. Read on for ideas on how to organize your primary, guest or kids' bedrooms, no matter your budget.

What to Do Before You Start

Set your goals. Consider the room's size and intended purpose, whether it's a primary bedroom, a child's bedroom or a guest bedroom. Think about your budget, your home's style and the decor in other parts of the house.

Your goal might be to turn your primary bedroom into a relaxing retreat, or perhaps your guest bedroom needs to be reimagined to accommodate a home office. I recommend writing down your goals to help keep you motivated during the process.

Some of my clients get stuck because they struggle with their style and design preferences. For these clients, I recommend creating a Houzz ideabook. Browse and save bedroom photos by room type, whether you're looking for ideas for a primary bedroom, a guest room or a child's bedroom. This may help you better conceptualize your style and ideas for the room.

Read the full editorial at houzz.com

For some of my clients, the guest room is a dumping ground for things they can't make decisions about, such as unused furniture and home decor, old linens, obsolete electronics and unfinished craft projects.

Since the holidays are approaching and out-of-town guests may be arriving, now might be the time to make decisions about these items. If you're no longer using something, it may be occupying valuable square footage that could be put to better use. I recommend donating anything that's keeping you from your goal for the space.